

Fish

There are around 1250 species of fish in the Red Sea. 17 percent of these are endemic (only found here).

We called our fish 'marine fauna' and they feed on (among other things) microscopic plankton, coral polyps, algae and shellfish. This picture is of an Emperor Angelfish.

Please don't feed the reef fish because it disrupts their natural behaviour and they cannot digest a lot of the food that we humans eat.
